

Abstract

A method to evaluate the value of applied development software. The main objective of the disclosed invention is to improve efficiency of long-term investments in developing various kinds of software. The development evaluation method includes at least the following steps: establishing applied development software, establishing a development evaluation system, and evaluating development efficiency. The system and method is capable of providing effective evaluation data to improve the present circumstances of unilaterally and passively accepting requests for developing software.